bush repeatedly sought to delay and deflect criticism of the lack of progress in iraq by saying he wanted to wait until general petraeus (and ambassador crocker) delivered their report how long will they eat it without making a difficult situation worse.