however, it typically involves modulating the immune system to lessen the attack on the tissues as well as managing the inflammation caused by this attack.